

Analysis with Conclusion

- How do sales vary by day of the week and hour of the day?

Conclusion: Sales are highest on weekdays during morning hours, especially between 7 AM and 10 AM. Sales gradually decrease after midday, with evenings showing the lowest activity.

- Are there any peak times for sales activity?

Conclusion: Yes, the peak sales time is in the morning, indicating that most customers visit the coffee shop for breakfast or before work.

- What is the total sales revenue for each month?

Conclusion: Monthly sales show a clear upward trend over time. Revenue starts at $81,677.74 in January, slightly declines in February ($76,145.19), then steadily increases through March ($98,834.68) and April ($118,941.08), reaching peak values in May ($156,727.76) and June ($166,485.88). This indicates growing demand and improving sales performance over the months.

- How do sales vary across different store locations?

Conclusion: Hell's Kitchen generates the highest sales revenue, while Astoria has the highest footfall, suggesting higher spending per customer at Hell's Kitchen.

- What is the average price per order per person?

Conclusion: The average bill per person is $4.69, and customers place about 1.44 orders per visit, indicating affordable pricing and quick purchase behavior.

- Which products are the best-selling in terms of quantity and revenue?

Conclusion: Barista Espresso is the top-selling product by revenue, followed by Hot Chocolate and Gourmet Brewed Coffee, showing a preference for premium beverages.

- How do sales vary by product category and product type?

Conclusion: Coffee is the dominant category, contributing the highest share of sales, followed by tea and bakery items, confirming coffee as the core revenue driver.